

DIARY OF GIRL SLAYER, REVEALS ARDENT LOVE OF CHICAGO MAN

NOTEBOOK QUOTE MAN SHE WON

Chicago, April 26.—Wanda Stopa, pretty girl slayer, who killed herself after slaying Henry Manning, former Wall Street architect, on a suburban estate, left a love diary, telling of her affection for Y. K. Smith, advertising man.

It was a pretty story, that the exciting woman and prominent Wall Street architect was shot down by Miss Stopa.

When it is ascertained that the diary of the girl, furnished by disappointed love, tells of a dramatic friendship that was born, it is not surprising that she loved and the man she loved.

It was her and another, the diary, which she wrote, after the drive in an attempt to kill him, because she loved him so much, because she loved him so much, because she loved him so much.

Various Things

All Short

FOR CALVIN COOLIDGE—Mr. President: Did you notice the statement made by Major Hensley, commanding Mitchell Flying Field, at a dinner of army and navy men? The substance of Mr. Hensley's speech was that the air force of the United States will amount to exactly nothing by 1927. You are the head of the army and navy, responsible to the country.

Vice-Chairman Kremer of the National Democratic Committee declares the people should determine by direct vote just how far this country should get mixed up with international quarrels. Some four years ago this very question was submitted to the people for a direct vote and they voted eight million in favor of minding our own business.

That was the biggest verdict ever rendered on any proposition in the history of free government and those who still wonder how the people feel about minding Europe's business could not possibly be convinced by anything short of an earthquake.

Mr. Wilson asked for a grand and solemn referendum and the day after the election the Republicans said it was grand and the Democrats agreed that it was solemn.

Mrs. Philipson, one of the eight women sitting in the British Parliament, will resign to go home and take care of her children. This is a distinct promotion. The job of motherhood outranks any position human government can bestow, both in dignity and importance.

It has been said that if they were free to do so, two-thirds of Europe would come here at once. And they would do it because we are separated from Europe not only by the Atlantic Ocean but by the American tradition of keeping out of Europe's troubles.

If you want to find out whether we should be European Butinskys, just go down to the first immigrant ship that comes here from any European port and take a vote on the proposition. It will be more one-sided than the Presidential vote of 1920.

A special sub-committee of the House Insular Committee suggests independence for the Philippines in 1950. This is what is known in slang circles as "passing the buck."

Go Ahead, Mr. Coolidge

Because—"Yes, We Have No Airplanes"

President Coolidge advocates cutting down flying machine armament. That is the last thing the United States ought to do. But just now it wouldn't hurt much, as we have not any flying machines worth mentioning.

What the United States OUGHT to do is build up as speedily as possible the greatest flying fleet in the world, making it self-supporting by postoffice work in peace and by its very existence making this country safe from attack.

The real way to obtain peace on earth, FOR THE UNITED STATES AT LEAST, is to build plenty of United States flying machines and submarines.

And the business of President Coolidge is to preserve peace for the United States, not to worry about Europe or Asia.

Specializing in Politics

It's Dangerous. Ask Pinchot

Governor Pinchot's overwhelming defeat in the Pennsylvania primaries shows that it is unwise for an American politician to specialize too much. Governor Pinchot, a man of the highest character, concentrated too much on prohibition and censorship.

Himself practically a perfect character, he doubtless believes it possible to make all Americans equally perfect by law. He was mistaken. Many Americans do not even WANT to be made perfect. The election, defeating him by 250,000 majority, will be a warning to others in politics.

How Do They Manage?

It is hard for an American to understand how they manage in Germany and in Russia with their money, which seems to have gone entirely "fluey."

A newspaper tells of an American who tendered a $50 bill to the proprietor of a small hotel in Berlin. The waiter, whom he sent to get the change, came back with two trays laden with paper money. He said sadly:

"I regret that we are short about one hundred thousand billion marks. Would you kindly accept the hotel as security for the balance."

"I have no use for the hotel," said the visitor, "but I give it to you for the tip."

"I thank you, sir," replied the waiter, "but if you have no objection I should prefer the five dollars."

TRY TO GET THE POINT OF YOUR CHILDREN
Parents, if you will not discommodate yourselves in an effort to please and interest your children, you must expect that they will do their best to please you.

Never was there a time when parents had a bigger job on their hands than they have at present.

It is an age of extravagance in many ways.

Extravagance in spending money, in wasting time, in the sort and amount of amusement demanded—and the quality of amusement must be thrilling—exciting.

The prosaic ways of middle-aged folk does not suit the modern youth.

Parents must understand if they wish to maintain association with their children, and they must be chimney and understanding with the boys and girls.

There must be the viewpoint of the child of demanding that the lady and the lady act as the older one would.

Try to get the viewpoint of your children before you make hard and fast rules, but do not make the mistake of being too lenient and too lenient.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

HOW fascinating a man finds his wife, and how much he is beginning to be bored with the "woman just before—"

Marriages is to a man like an automobile accident; he never sees it coming beforehand—and never can tell you, afterward, HOW it happened.

A man may succeed in kissing a girl on the cheek, or the cheek, or the nose—but never on the lips—against her will.

"If you're Helen Rowland got the price," said the man, "of course, youth, charm, health, love, and a true friend, which are the only things most of us want."

Every man is a potential tyrant; and it takes an adventure of all the favor when he has to observe that "Teacher may lay out—"

Being offered a love he can't refuse, when he is starving for one he can't get, is to a man like a piece of offered coffee and beans when he is longing for coffee and beans.

Apparently, as soon as a husband and wife can afford two for a double-truck marriage, copyright, 1924, King Features Synd., Inc.

Grandma's Offer
Could you send me an address of a little girl that was a cousin of mine and would also like some summer dresses the same size as I. I prefer to send them out of New Hampshire. I would like to correspond with a nice young girl, someone who has a good heart, and can write cheerful letters for this is my only pleasure. It would bring me sunshine.

A SOLDIER GRANDMA.
Thank you. We have sent you the address of Mrs. A. C. Five

Editor Helping Hand:
I received a bundle of clothes for my nine-year-old girl from someone in Providence, R. I., and she didn't send any address with the bundle, so I can't write and thank her personally. Please print this so she will know I appreciate what she did for my girl.

Shoes and Dresses
Editor Helping Hand:
I have as follows: Five pairs of shoes (partly worn) for women, sizes between 7 and 8, several dresses for girls between 5 and 10, three hair ribbons and a few patch pieces. I would like to have them go to one family living in my very near Boston. I should be very glad to deliver them.

Widow Asks Aid
Editor Helping Hand:
I wish you would put this in the Helping Hand. I have three children that need clothes and shoes very badly. Their ages are, a boy seven and two girls eleven and thirteen. Also I would like to get some black clothes for myself, size 38 or 40. The boy wears size 1 shoe and the girls size 3 and 4. A. T.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON SELF-SACRIFICE AS AN ART

By DR. FRANK CRANE

SELF-SACRIFICE is an art. Like the other arts, it has its technique.

There are those who have the gift of it, as some have the natural bent for music. These sacrifice themselves gracefully.

Most of us fear to be imposed upon. The self-sacrificer does not mind. He enjoys ministering to your comfort; if you take advantage of his disposition he seems to enjoy it still more.

All of us sacrifice ourselves a great deal; in the intercourse with our family and our friends we are compelled to; but for the most part we do it awkwardly.

The man gives up his own desired amusements for his wife's sake and his children's; but he talks about it, reminds you of it continually, and spoils it.

The woman devotes her time to her household, denies herself a hundred liberties, but grows eloquent in her self-praise; her beneficiaries secretly pray that she be less noble and more agreeable.

So a deal of so-called acts of self-sacrifice are convulsions of egotism.

If you have not the natural instinct you must all the more carefully study the technique, the secret of which is to let your left hand not know what your right hand does. The least self-consciousness, the least self-advertisement, the least manifestation of expecting praise, is a fly in the ointment.

There are those who yield their seat to a lady in a street car, or rise and present their chair in a drawing room, with an air that makes you uncomfortable.

There are persons who agree to your opinion in a way that is half-insult.

To pay the bill for a party in a restaurant and to do it in such a way as to leave a pleasing impression upon all requires not a little skill.

To complain that one does not appreciate what you do, to say that you are glad to sacrifice yourself if the recipients of your favor are only grateful, shows that you do not understand the first principles of the matter.

Self-sacrifice must be made in simplicity, with ease, concealing the cost. It must be with utter self-effacement.

If you cannot do that, if you must wish for a return, for gratitude, for thanks, and to have your little vanity stroked, then self-sacrifice is out of your line. Do not meddle with an art for which you have no taste nor ability.

To sacrifice your beliefs, your inborn tastes and the essentials of your personality, even for one you love, is a mistake. Thus the act of self-sacrifice on your part pleases me most when I see that you most please yourself.

The finest flavored self-sacrifice is a kind of self-indulgence: the pleasure you give to another appeals more to you than any pleasure you might secure for yourself.

The act of self-sacrifice on your part pleases me most when I see that you most please yourself.

The highest type of gentleman or lady is one who is a virtuoso in self-conquest, one in whom giving pleasure to others is keener than getting pleasure for self.

Self-sacrifice is an art, but it is the most interesting and profitable of all arts, and adds most to the joy of living when it is well done.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON CLASSICS, CITIZENS

By Garrett P. Serviss, Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

WHAT America needs above all is good citizens. I connect with this truism an educational motto that comes from my alma mater, Cornell University. There they have lately opened new courses in the Greek language and more are pressing for entry into the classes. While there are indications that of similar opportunity to study Virgilian Latin would meet with an equally eager welcome.

The professor who is credited with having been the chief agent in the creation of this new educational vision at Cornell says that Greek and Latin, as studies, are "good, above all, the training in citizenship."

That is the exact truth. For pure mental training I cannot think that any language equals mathematics. And I do not think that either Latin or Greek, nor even any "living" language, except, of course, one's native tongue, furnishes as important a study for the average educated person as elementary mathematics.

But on the plane of citizenship, the two great classics, which supplied nearly every one of our forefathers regarded as "learning," remain unsurpassed.

The most important of all history for intensive study is Roman history. The whole story of human emancipation from human oppression is told there more clearly, more interestingly and more consecutively than anywhere else. There is no other people retained through law, most plainly reveals itself.

"The Romans," said John Jacques Rousseau, "are the people that we most often transgress our laws, and no other people have had such good ones."

These Roman laws, these Roman States learned more lessons from ancient Rome than from any other source. The French Revolution was started and carried forward by thinkers who drew their inspiration from the knowledge of the original language of the laws. There is no assimilation and assimilation of the translation. If you have once read the laws of Cicero or Tacitus in the original Latin, you find that the language is a heaven which tends to make a whole mass of heavy translation.

I wish I had studied Latin and Greek more than I did. I didn't know work in these languages as I do now. I didn't know that work furnishes the only true recreation.
